THE STORY OF MAGGIE CANNON.

BY W. PITT RIDE.

[ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.]

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

"Now then, little party," said a voice.

"Oh, don't," she cried, rubbing her eyes, "that should hurt."

"What are we doing here, eh?" said the tall man.

She blinked up at him, half recognising the voice.

"This is no place for us. Up-a-daisy!" He saw her to her feet, she was trembling, and the effort pained every bone. "We've not I rather fancy. You gave me a nice old last time I saw you."

"Aren't you fond of dancing?" Her teeth chattered.

"I went to that address you gave me," he said,

"and when I'd warned the man that I was able to do six months if he neglected his child, I found out—here he laughed cheerfully—"I found out only daughter was grown up, married, and doing well with a husband in the coal and potato trade."

"I didn't expect me to tell the truth, did you?"

"Your manner was so straightforward," he confessed—"that here I hold up that I was took in. Come along and see my sister and have a look. I live close here."

"I—I—stammered. Maggie, slipping down on one knee, "I can't walk."

He took her up in his arms in the way of a barber who in his time had had amateur experiences in the carrying of his customers. The Maggie proved a heavier burden than anticipated, for he gave a sigh of relief when, on arriving at a small house in a long, quiet street, the door opened and he saw a black woman.

"But you're an artist," said the stout young woman. "The Society don't expect you to work when you're off duty."

"I never off duty," he replied. "Catch hold of this."

The young woman took Maggie as she was stood on her feet in the passage, and led her into the kitchen at the back.

"Well, old party," called out the big voice in the passage after a while. "What'd you make of it?"

"One mass of bruises," cried the young woman with compassion in her voice, "from top to toe.

And she's fainting."

"Right you are," said he promptly. "I'll go and fetch the doc."

Maggie was in bed when the doctor arrived.

His presence did not disturb the quiet rest, it appeared to be able to comfort little sedately under any circumstances, which complaint could not truly be said to be the result of a MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES.

Now that the successful representations of comedies in the open air are to be closed with a daylight experiment at Darling Point this afternoon—again and of the Children's Hospital—it may be pointed out that the "As You Like It" was performed in this way a few months ago in London. This was at the Botanical Gardens, Regent's Park, in the presence of an aristocratic gathering. During the week the marked success of the ideal was again seen at Baltimore (U.S.A.), where the natural amphitheatre accommodated some 500 people. A much more important event in this direction was the same country by Mr. Henry Lee, whose assistance would have been gladly given by the present occasion but for the pressure of work attending on the closing nights of his season at the Palace Theatre.

Mr. Henry Lee's open-air revival of "As You Like It" took place in 1900 in the last of the great quadrangle of the Grand Union Hotel, Stratford, in which 3000 people were seated at a uniform rate of 1000 a seat. The source of attraction on this occasion was the star, who was a perfect orchestra of 40 players and singers from the famous Orpheus Society of New York. Miss Rose Coghlan was the Roman, Mr. Robert Mantell the Orlando, Mr.

Henry Lee the Jaques (replacing Mr. McKee Rankin, at that time), and every other artist, down to the Wrecker (an athlete named Maldon) was of mark. It is, however, the arrangement of the play scene that is of chief interest. It appears that there was a natural elevation in the centre of the quadrangle park. Mr. Lee accordingly made his characters emerge upon the scene by ascending the hill through entrances between newly-planted saplings, so that as to the scenery, the effect was a most successful one. The whole affair, which was not for charity, was an immense success, no fewer than nine State Presidents being present, as well as representatives from all over America—Chicago being the chief centre of social activity. Mr. Lee organised a similar open-air entertainment for the following year at the Chicago Exhibition for "Poetry Day." At this distinguished artist's return to Australia for many years, his presence will be a great asset to the cause of the theatre in a similar way on some future occasion.

Mr. Antonio Dolores is now again in Melbourne, where he has given two successful nights of the past few days, with Mr. Charles Newell as pianist, and now proposes to enjoy Cup week as a holiday before leaving Sydney. The French soprano sang an immense success in Western Australia, and stayed there quite a long time. When at Kalamunda she sang a number of songs, and was much admired. She is now in Western Australia, and

THE NORTHERN TERRITORY.

SOME OF THE SPRINGS AND RIVERS.

BY HERBERT FAYEN.

The fate of the Northern Territory is just now troubling the balance, and its future greatly depends upon the decision of the Federal Government as to whether it is to be taken over by the Commonwealth or left to linger on as a poor relation of South Australia. The Northern Territory has never had what may be called fair play. Those who know it well will readily admit, and perhaps with a transfer of authority a brighter period might open out for this territorial outlook. It has had its period of short-lived, undisturbed prosperity, but it has into the stagnant monotony of continuous depression.

The ruinous policy adopted by the South Australian Government of leasing huge tracts of land for a poor return has done more to keep the Territory back than anything else, for it made the country a happy hunting-ground for the speculative syndicate, who for years has helped to turn it into a thing of the past. The bona-fide pioneers who put stock in the Territory have been driven out, and the country and made it habitable have suffered and told and gone to the wall like all Australian pioneers. The Federal Government will have to institute more modern principles of land legislation if the State is to turn to right.

But it is to some of the natural features of the Territory that we have to draw attention, and more especially the coastal rivers of the north and their distinctive characteristics. As the presence of the territory in the Commonwealth is a federal State, it is a natural elevation in the centre of the territory, and it is a natural elevation in the centre of the territory, and it is a natural elevation in the centre of the territory, and it is a natural elevation in the centre of the territory, and it is a natural BOACHMAKERS' SOCIETY.

DISPUTE IN THE TRADE.
 trouble in the coachmaking trade, which has between one of the masters and 28 of his apprentices, was considered by the Coachmakers' Association at a special meeting of the Trades' Hall last night. The meeting was presided over by Mr. W. H. Jones, who announced that the employer in question neglected to the demand of the men for a working day of eight hours. At the same time, he reserved the right to fix the rates of which he would pay. The meeting decided that a deputation should wait the employer to-day with a view to discussing the matter. It was resolved that if the demands of the men met complied with they should be called out on by the union.

It is stated that the total daily circulation of newspapers in Great Britain is now 21 millions, as against 18 millions in 1870. The figures for the week which may be taken to be under rather than over the average are as follows:—The total circulation was 14,000,000 on Monday, 15,000,000 on Tuesday, 16,000,000 on Wednesday, 17,000,000 on Thursday, 18,000,000 on Friday, 19,000,000 on Saturday, and 20,000,000 on Sunday. The circulation exceeded yesterday by that of the London papers.

increased by $823,000, the addition being in represented by the transfer of a portion of sum in excess of a million by which the o deposits were reduced. The bank has mad addition to its loans of $203,000, the whole of The elements resulting as stated in a reduction in the reserve, and a further loss of £217,000 from the stock of coals and ballion in both departments. The result was a saving of £168,000 against the increase of per cent. in the open market rate. A discount—the rate, 22 per cent., being higher than the bank rate—was also obtained.

It has been since the beginning of June, and the price of coal has fallen to about 10s. 6d. Since Wednesday there has been a further decline of $\frac{1}{2}$ in Consols, making the drop for the week 1½ p. At 92, the price is a very low one, and it is not probable that it will rise again without doubtless being greeted by the cause we mentioned yesterday in producing it. Australian shares have not shared in the decline.

There has been a slight fall in the smaller produce on the whole further suffered during the week. Bradford pots have held their own. Goodrough, Mort, and Co., Limited, report the receipt of 100,000 tons of iron ore at 10s. 6d. per ton under yesterday's date.—“Merino sheep are doing a farthing a pound. Crossbreds changed compared with last year’s.” And Hants and Dorset, Jones, and Sons, who were also reported to be following close on their heels. Look at the 24th instant.—“Sheepskin market has fallen to 4d per lb. There was some demand for the same, and the sale in that of copy material for immediate delivery.

While the general principle for which the Puleford contends—that producers should pay the cost of the railway—is a sound one, it is not so in the case of stranding rivers or building wharves by the coastal producer; it is undoubtedly a sound one in the case of inland producers, but it is not equally so from stating the case completely as fairly: “Why the inland producers must that the coastal producers need not pay it is a point which has been raised in connection with the question when completely stated will show that both the inland and coastal producers are helped by the other members of the community and the former vastly more than the latter. The annual report of the Railway Commission shows that 1286 selected miles of railways made good of £224,230 in the year 1900, which is the same good in part at the expense of inland producers. The result is not represented all. The deficiency for the result is calculated against those bearing the cost at the rate of £3 13s 3d per annum, whereas inland is considered to be £1 10s 6d per annum. This would show a surplus of £104,363 (1900), if reckoned against the actual cost, but would be a considerable deficiency, and a large portion of this would have to be added to the cost of inland producers. The inland producers of the interior are, and have been, helped for many years by other railway customers, and to the extent of the deficiency by the general public. The inland producers are not, however, over, the expenditure as in precisely the same way, of expenditure as the railway or drainage authority, without yielding tolls, and we think the great bulk of the money is spent without tolls. The inland producers are helped by these gifts to the producers have been and are to be irregular. They, however, represent a rough and ready system of distribution of aid at the expense of inland producers. The inland producers adequate view of the matter will leave no doubt that the inland producers are helped to a much larger degree through the railways and to a much smaller than the coastal producers through the public.

Mr. A. H. K. Maxwell, of Gaird, Paterson, & Co., has joined the board of the Perpetual Trust Co. in the place of Mr. G. S. Caird.

It is announced that Mr. E. H. Sotherton, S.E.A., the chief clerk of Kent and Surrey, has been admitted as a partner of the firm.

Although buyers continue to ignore lack of confidence among sellers, there is a growing belief in trade circles that some material alterations in the tariff will be made by the House in Committee.

The market for sugar has been quiet since the quota needs. Prices did not exhibit any great change from those quoted earlier in the week.

Sugar.—The demand was of a steady character for all grades of sugar. The following prices were quoted 100 over and above the Colonial Sugar Company's prices for parcels under half-ton:

rich gold-bearing vein about a quarter of a mile from the surface shows an average yield of 100 lbs. of gold per ton of ore. The veins are washed out from the surface. The vein is small and yet not so small as to be unprofitable. The veins are raising good stone from their mines, and crushing shortly.

At Mount Pleasant crushing has already been begun.

EXTRACTION OF COPPER

A NEW PROCESS PROPOSED

ORANGE

A local metallurgist, Mr. Payne, has been perfecting a process for the extraction of copper from oxidized ores by means of solution and precipitation, which is of a very promising character. The process is being tried on a small scale, and the results are very satisfactory. The process is being tried on a small scale, and the results are very satisfactory. The process is being tried on a small scale, and the results are very satisfactory.

water is prepared and heated to about 100° F. and the sludge is pumped on to the belt of copper is very rapid while the sludge is being pumped. It usually takes 10 to 15 sec. to pump 100 gal. of water on four per cent. ore, but it is confident that it will simply cover all the ore.
